Legislative Update

Manufactured Homes

Some of you may have heard about an issue in our community where residents in manufactured or mobile home parks are experiencing problems with management. Sudden water bills, unresponsive management, new lease expectations and more can cause housing prices to rise, or cause serious concerns for the residents of these communities.

For parks that I have received multiple complaints about, I have mailed a packet of information to all residents. These packets contain:

- Potential legal resources at Legal Services for Eastern Michigan;
- Where to file a complaint at the attorney general's office;
- Information on how to make a complaint with the Michigan Manufactured Housing Commission and;
- A resource guide called "A Practical Guide for Tenants and Landlords."

If you'd like, you can view that guide here:

<https://www.legislature.mi.gov/Publications/tenantlandlord.pdf>

If you or a family member are experiencing issues with your manufactured home, park management, or have questions about your legal rights, please reach out. My staff is always happy to help or to send you information that may be useful.

Conversations with Cherry

Join me out and about for my community conversation series. I'll give a brief legislative update, then I'll have time for any questions, comments or concerns you'd like to share. These events are family friendly.

Helpful Resources for the Folks in the 49th

Taking one last summer vacation?

You've booked your trip, researched the must-see attractions, recharged your electronics, packed your bags — and now you're ready to lock the door and take off on your big vacation. But traveling smart starts with what you do before leaving for vacation. I always check these 10 things off my to-do list. They help ensure that I come home to find my place just as I left it.

1. Turn off your main water supply if you will be gone a long time. Leaks happen. And they can happen while you're away. Turn off your main water supply if you're going to be gone for a week or more. If you forget and a leak does happen, your homeowners or renters insurance may cover that type of water damage.

2. Don't post your plans on social media, answering machine or voicemail. Tell trusted friends that you will be gone personally and post those vacation photos AFTER you return.

3. Invest in a timer. Deter would-be burglars by putting timers on lights in different rooms. Set them to go on and off at various times throughout the night and no one will know you're not actually there. Make use of your television timer too – to have the television turn on and off at times you would normally be home.

4. Stop mail and newspaper service if you will be gone more than a few days or have a trusted friend pick it up so it doesn't pile up.

5. Adjust your thermostat - If you live in a place where AC is a must during the summer months, adjust the thermostat a bit to save on your electricity bill. A good rule of thumb is to keep it about five degrees higher than normal. By not turning off the AC completely, you'll keep enough air circulating to control humidity and mold.

6. Leave the curtains open. Keep the outside as “normal” as possible. Closed curtains also stop those who aim to help—the police, your neighbors or friends—from seeing inside your house. Leave your curtains exactly as you usually keep them when you're home, since noticeable changes could hint that you're not around anymore—especially if your curtains are uncharacteristically left closed for two weeks. Move expensive items, like jewelry or computers, out of plain sight if they're visible from the window.

7. Take out the garbage and recycling, wash all dishes and clean out the refrigerator.

8. Call your local law enforcement to request vacation or vacant home checks for the time you will be gone. This will establish police presence around your property as well as help discover any unfortunate events sooner. Consider notifying the police if you're going on vacation. No need to let the cops know about a weekend getaway but do call them if you're leaving town for longer than a week or two. If you have a security alarm, leave a house key and the code with someone you trust, and provide the police and alarm company with their name and phone number. You may also want to contact your local neighborhood watch program if there's one in your area.

Preventing Oak Wilt

Oak wilt is a deadly tree fungus that is threatening some of our oldest oak stands. Symptoms of Oak Wilt vary by tree species but generally consist of leaf discoloration – with the edges of the leaves turning brown first, wilt, defoliation from the center crown, and rapid death of the tree- sometimes in as few as three weeks. If an oak tree is infected, it begins to die rapidly, and the disease will spread to nearby oaks through their grafted root network. An entire grove can die in one summer season.

Follow these steps to prevent oak wilt disease;

- Select well-seasoned firewood.
- Safely store unknown sources of firewood. Cover the woodpile with a clear piece of plastic. Burying the edges of the plastic will prevent the entry or exit of insects that might have been attracted to diseased wood and fungal mats.
- Destroy diseased oaks. A knowledgeable arborist or forester should diagnose oak wilt in oaks that die rapidly within 2-3 weeks or in groups of two or more trees over several years.
- Avoid wounding oaks during vulnerable seasons of April through July. November through March is the best time for pruning of oaks. Fall and cold of winter reduce insect activity and allow the pruning wounds to seal before spring.
- If injury does occur to a tree in the summer due to storms or accidents, trim broken branches and paint all oak wounds including pruning cuts with latex paint or pruning tar immediately
- Avoid removing infected oaks in the summer. Wait until the dormant period to remove infected trees.
